Story

The Pothiers family has cared for this estate in the Côte Roannaise region of the Loire Valley for generations. The area, known as "Volcanic Loire," is at the foothills of the Massif Central overlooking the southern Loire. In 2005, winemaker Romain Paire joined his parents in the family winemaking tradition. Their certified Biodynamic vineyard lies on the best granitic hills, between 1,200 and 1,500 feet in elevation.

Vineyard

Nestled in Villemontais village, the estate spans 21 hectares (52 acres), with vines flourishing nearby. Côte Roannaise, part of the Loire Valley, rests south of the river near its springs. This discreet vineyard covers just over 230 hectares (568 acres) of prime granitic hills, ranging from 400 to 500 meters (1200 to 1500 feet) in elevation. The sandy soils nurture 30 to 70-year-old vines.

Vinification

The grapes are carefully sorted by hand in both the vineyard and the cellar. During winemaking, the focus is on old vines, with most of them destemmed. This is followed by a 12-day maceration, occasionally punched down. The wine then matures for 10 months in concrete vats.

Tasting Notes

Pale purple color in the glass. The nose is of cherry, red currant and strawberry notes. On the palate, complex aromas of jammy fruit and spices continue with a light liveliness and harmonious tannins.

Food Pairing

This wine is ideal with BBQ, beef Bourguignon or with farmhouse cheeses like cheddar or cottage cheese.
